

My name is Davaughn Smith and I'm the Deputy Head Boy of JRCS

Being Deputy Head Boy has given me a new role, given me confidence and opportunities to exploit the role to the best of my ability. Attaining this position against my many other peers and candidates has shown me how far you can climb that status ladder if you actually try.

Here's a little piece about me:

I joined JRCS in 2013, getting all excited about starting a new school with new sights in my mind. However, I was quite apprehensive and sheepish, not doing much to be noticed. But over time with each new term I have gained more and more experienced, increasing my ego.

Even though I love all my subjects I must say that English, Maths and History has always been my priority subjects.

Over the years I have gained experience and multiple accomplishments hanging under my belt including my academic escalation. I have also been involved with many opportunities that JRCS has handed over to me like the Student Voice (which I have been partaking for 5 years); after school activities; DofE; peer-mentoring; being awarded the Jack Petchey Award; talking to important visitors representing the school; and given the position of Deputy Head Boy. All this JRCS has given me in order to mature into a promising young man. This school is excellent compared to others in the Borough, a multi-cultural society and a safe place to be in giving us all the resources we need in order to excel.

Being in Year 11 I have a few hobbies (due to our new gruellingly hard GCSE's in order to go to the best university) but they include calisthenics; reading (tons); and spending time on YouTube for both educational purposes and relaxation.

In general I would like to say a prodigious thanks to all our teachers and staff that have supported me all the way as they helped me understand the concept of responsibility.

I am truly thankful.
